

Sarah Lee

Sarah is an experienced business professional with a strong skill set acquired during 13 years in financial services and two years in management consultancy. Prior to joining Obsidian she spent the majority of her career at General Electric Company (GE) where she operated at senior management level in client management, quality and corporate responsibility roles. She has extensive experience of strategy development, change management programmes, project leadership/ mentoring and process improvement, including six sigma. While at GE Sarah was responsible for managing a large culture change project which involved embedding new brand values and new ways of working.

Since joining Obsidian in 2006 Sarah has been successfully delivering consultancy, training and coaching assignments. She is an accredited Obsidian coach and holds a Diploma in Performance Coaching.

Sarah is committed to delivering on client needs and has worked with a wide range of clients and partners in both the private and public sector.